

Care Abroad

An international care management solution for customers who have employees working or treating outside the continental U.S.

According to the U.S. State Department, roughly 6.4 million Americans are either working or studying abroad. In this increasingly global economy, employers need assurance that their employees have international access to care. To fill this void, Genex has developed an international program offering a full continuum of services from early intervention case management to repatriation, including a network of more than 17,000 health care providers in over 140 countries. Whether injured in the U.S. and returning to their country of origin, or injured while working abroad, Genex Care Abroad is available to coordinate care.
